Exercise 1 – Marvel Heroes

Exercise 1.1

For the first exercise, open the index.html-file from the root folder. Here, we want to make each <li> content a link to its respective page. Make these pages open in a new tab.

The result should look like this:

Exercise 1.2

In the second exercise, open the ant-man/index.html-file. Above the <h1> tag, make a link that leads back to the homepage. This link will load in the same page (it won't open in a new tab).

After that, add the picture "ant-man-landscape_incredible.jpg" from the img-folder. Include the caption "Ant-Man (comic version) wearing his suit" under the image.

This is the look we want to achieve:

Ant Man

A good man with a criminal past, Scott Lang builds upon the legacy of one of the founding Avengers as the size-changing hero Ant-Man.

From the Big House to the Ant Farm

Exercise 1.3

For the third exercise, go to the <h2> tag in the ant-man/index.html-file. Under the  tag, make a link to Iron Man's page, and add the image "iron-man-standard_small.jpg" from the iron-man/img-folder so it loads Iron Man's page when clicked. Make this load in the same tab. Add the caption "Iron Man" under the image.

This part should look like this:

Exercise 2 – Personal Portfolio

Make a personal page with three different pages: "Home", "Curriculum Vitae" and "Contact data" (feel free to use fake data if you wish). These pages need to include:

- Home page: title, description, image and a list of hobbies
- CV: include at least education and language sections
- Contact data: Facebook, twitter, etc.

These are the only requirements, but you can add more information/functions if you want to.

Use comments in your code, structure and validate it (https://validator.w3.org/). This makes your code more readable for both yourself and others.

Try to use the elements presented in class so far. And use the proper tag for each situation.
